AN INLAND SEA.

About two weeks ago the great desert which borders on the Colorado river in Southern California began to assume the appearance of a lake. This desert is below sea level, and since the advent of the whites has been noted only for its sand, salt, alkali and the size of its lizards and horn toads. No water, except in the rainy season, and then only for an hour or two at a time, was ever seen on its surface, though the belief has been prevalent that it was at some period in the world's history an inland sea, and there has been vague rumors that travelers at one time saw the timbers of a vessel protruding from one of the sand hills which abound in places in the desolate region. There was some talk years ago of turning the Colorado river into this basin by means of a canal, which it was proposed to dig through the sand ridges which separate it from that stream, but the project was not received with favor, though scientists concluded that it would modify the temperature, which is now torrid, and make the high lands surrounding the desert habitable. Since then the Southern Pacific Railroad was built through the desert and salt works have been established at one of the lowest points in the basin. Near these works, in fact, surrounding them, the new lake or sea has made its appearance. The source from which the water emanates has not been discovered. Some contend that the lake is caused by the overflow of the Colorado river, which finds its way through the sand hills to the low ground, but this theory is not substantiated, as the Colorado is now much lower than when the desert was dry. Others are of the opinion that the great Salt Lake of Utah has found an outlet in this low ground, but as it has been conclusively proved that none of the lakes of the Utah basin, which includes Nevada, has a subterranean outlet, this theory must fall to the ground. A third, and the most plausible theory advanced, is that the new lake is formed by water from the Gulf of California, which finds its way underground to the desert, which is from one hundred to two hundred feet lower than the surface of the gulf.

It is probable that the cause of this mysterious flow of water will be ascertained in a few weeks The evaporation on the deserts of Nevada is so great as to be almost incredible in July and August and it is doubtless greater on the Colorado deserts Thousands who crossed the plains in early days to California, believed that Humboldt lake had a subterranean outlet. They could not conceive how the waters of such a large stream, as the Humboldt frequently is, with no visible outlet, could otherwise be prevented from over-flowing the adjacent valley. Since those days the lake into which the Humboldt discharges has been dry and its bed, which is not even gravelly, is almost impervious to water, totally disproving the theory that it has a subterranean outlet, but satisfying the farmers who now live on its shores, that the water evaporates. As the same climatic conditions exist in Utah, Great Salt Lake is kept within bounds, as are all the other lakes in Utah and Nevada, by evaporation, not by subterranean outlets to the Colorado desert, as some of the theorists who are now trying to account for the new lake are disposed to believe.

Shooting in a Court-Room.

Special to the Journal.

RED BLUFF, Cal., July 7.—Great excitement was caused by a shooting affray in Justice Polley's Court this afternoon. P. H Coffman and C. H. Braynard were recently employed by Mrs. Belle Lunsford, in a suit where some of her propety was attached. They won the suit, but she failed and refused to pay them for their services and employed William and Charles G. Nagle to defend the suit which followed to-day.

During the progress of the trial frequent wordy conflicts occurred and a personal encounter seemed imminent several times. Charles Nagle remarked they, meaning Braynard and Coffman, might win their case, if they were not trying to swindle a poor woman out of $100.

"Do you mean that" asked Coffman.

Nagle replied that he did, when Koffman picked up a chair and struck at Nagle. William Nagle started to his brother's assistance, when Braynard pulled his pistol and began firing, four shots entering his victim. Charles Nagle rushed upon Braynard, but escaped without injury. They were parted when Braynard left the court-room, but afterwards gave himself up and is now in jail.

Nagle was taken to his home and to-night his physician says he cannot possibly recover. There was an old feud between the Braynards and Nagles, owing to family troubles.

Doors Opened for Wholesale Smuggling

Special to the Journal.

BLAINE, Wash., July 7.—Twenty-seven Chinese laborers arrived yesterday from Portland on the steamer Michigan to work in a salmon cannery. The United States revenue cutter Wolcott closely followed the Michigan and remained near until the Chinese landed. No trouble has occurred yet, but great excitement prevails, and it is thought no attempt will be made to drive the Chinese out of town. It is believed this invoice of Chinese at this point on the Gulf of Georgia and the international boundary line will open the doors for wholesale smuggling from British Columbia to the United States.

DEATH BY ELECTRICITY.

Four Murderers Pay the Penalty of Their Crimes.

Special to the Journal.

SING SING, July 7.—The electrocution of the four murderers, Slocum, Smiler, Wood and Jugiro, was done this morning. Slocum was killed at 4:42½, Smiler at 5:14, Wood at 5:39 and Jugiro at 6:05.

One of the witnesses of the affair gives the following account of the occurrences in the death chamber: "After the experts had tested the electric current and found everything in order, Warden Brown, Deputy Warden Connaughton and two deputies then entered the death cell building. Slocum was selected as the first victim and he stepped out of his cell with alacrity. Slocum halted at the Warden's command just on the edge of the rubber mat which was to protect those who were to watch his life go out. The doomed man's gaze was riveted on the chair. Then it wandered to the dangling wire and the closet from which it was suspended. Back to the chair it came, like a needle to the magnet and he started as though he had received a shock from the wire when the Warden began reading the death warrant. The witnesses were grouped to the left of the chair, the scientists stood in front of the switchboard watching the current. The executioner was heard to rise from his chair in the closet and place himself ready to do his duty. With an attempt at a smile Slocum seated himself in the chair and leaned his head back against the rubber rest as though he was simply preparing to be shaved. The forced smile remained on his face, while Connaughton began fastening the straps. The straps crossed and recrossed the body, and the legs were tightly bound to a foot rest. Then his arms were fastened and Slocum could no longer move a muscle. Finally the oddly arranged set of straps that bound the chair in one position and covered the eyes were placed in position. The positive electrode was placed to Slocum's head, the same as in the Kemmler electrocution. The negative electrode was attached to the right leg, the trousers having been rolled up for the purpose before Slocum was bound to the chair. When the electrodes were adjusted and the wires attached the current was steady and registered 1,600 volts. Prof. Laudy's hand grasped the handle of the switch which turned the current into the wires in the electrocutioner's closet. Warden Brown raised his hand and Prof. Laudy turned the switch. The Warden tapped on the closet and the unknown inside gave a quick pull to the lever. The electric fluid was released before the sound of the tap reached Slocum's ears and sped through his body. There was not a tremor of the body as the physician counted the seconds, and when Prof. Laudy turned off the current Slocum sat rigid and lifeless in the chair.

When the electrodes were removed it was discovered that the skull and leg were slightly burned, but there was no smell of roasting flesh, such as made the Kemmler electrocution so horrible. The straps were loosened and the body was carried back into a rear room.

Smiler did not hesitate when told his hour had come, but when the death chair appeared before him he almost fell to the floor. His knees knocked together and but for the support of his spiritual advisers he would certainly have collapsed. Warden Brown quickly read the death warrant and Smiler was hastily seated in the chair. His face took on a ghastly hue and Connaughton got no assistance from his victim in arranging the straps. Smiler was bound and the electrodes applied in a much briefer time than Slocum's and in a few seconds Smiler was also dead. The same slight burning under the electrodes was noticed as in Slocum's case.

Wood betrayed no emotion when he gazed on the chair, but kept his eyes fixed on the crucifix. He sat down in the chair dilidently and the binding was accomplished so quickly that it was only 24 minutes from Smiler's end until death came to him. It was becoming easy to kill men.

The witnesses displayed no emotion. There was nothing to cause nausea, and death came to its victims so quickly that it was all over before they realized it.

Jugiro at first refused to leave his cell, but when Connaughton said: "Come on Joe, be a brave man," the Jap walked out quietly. Two additional keepers marched, one on each side of the Jap. The Jap did not seem to comprehend the purpose of the chair, and seated himself without protest. The current was allowed to remain on the Jap's body about three seconds longer than in contact with the others. Accordingly his skull and leg were strongly marked by the electrodes.

The Robert and Minnie Libel Dismissed.

Special to the Journal.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The decision of Judge Ross yesterday dismissing the libel against the schooner Robert and Minnie, which vessel supplied arms to the Itata, was a great surprise to the officials here. It was generally believed the case against her was much stronger than that which could be made out against the Itata, and notwithstanding the reservation made by Judge Ross in his decision, it is felt that his action will cause the failure of the original libel lodged against the Chilean vessel, although she may still be held on some technical charge connected with her escape while under legal detention. This outcome would be a severe disappointment to the State and Naval Department officials, after an expenditure direct and indirect in the chase of the Itata estimated to run closely in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The Salton Lake.

Special to the Journal.

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—The party sent out by the Southern Pacific last week to find the source of the desert lake at Salton has returned and reports that the water leaves the Colorado river eight miles from El Rio and flows through several channels to Arroyo Mucho Station, where they join, making a stream 150 yards wide and having a velocity of four miles an hour. The water was too deep to be measured. At Almo Mucho, 52 miles from the river, the stream enters the desert for Salton. This settles conclusively the source of the water.

Fire in the Home Stake Mine.

Special to the Journal.

WHITE OAKS, N. M., July 7.—A fire raged in the shaft of the Home Stake mine from Wednesday to Friday morning. Two miners, E. Timothy and George Drake, were suffocated by gas, despite the efforts of citizens to extinguish the fire and save them. Four citizens were prostrated while attempting to descend the shaft before the flames were extinguished.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

"THE NIGHT SHIFT."

A Good Play by a Good Company.

The Russell Dramatic Company opened at McKissick's Opera House, to a fair audience last night.

The play was the five-act comedy drama "The Night Shift." The scene is laid in a mining town and the characters are true to life. The leading character is Jack Benford, a young miner, and the heroine, Edith Thorndyke, both of which were admirably sustained and highly appreciated by the audience.

The company deserves the praise so lavishly bestowed upon it by the Virginia City papers, and it should draw crowded houses. To-night the play will be the "Black Flag" and every seat should be filled.

Races! Races!

The programme for next Sunday's races at Steamboat Springs will be as follows:

First—Quarter mile dash for three-year-olds and upwards, horses carrying weights for age. Purse $100.

BIMETALISM A NECESSITY.

Senator Stewart's Reply to Clews.

JOURNAL's Special Washington Correspondent.

The polemics of the gold trust do not appear so well equipped with material to combat the arguments of Senator Stewart for the free coinage of silver as was imagined. Their efforts in that direction are labored and far-fetched, and entirely foreign to the point in view. It was supposed that enough advocates of the gold standard could be found to enter the contest as to make it possible for the debate to proceed regularly each day. Such, however, is not the case, for it took the last arguer on that side three days before he was ready to hand in his paper to the editor of the Evening Telegram. The public are not compelled to wait for the silver champion's replies, as his writings are in the editor's hands a couple of hours before they are needed to appear in print the day following those of his opponents.

Those who have so far entered the field seem to be completely exhausted of facts with which to contend against the disquisitions of our distinguished Nevada Senator, for they deal in nothing but abuse and epithets. They expend their whole argument in an endeavor to demonstrate that the advocacy of free coinage is a scheme of the mine owners to enhance the price of the silver they have for sale, to the disadvantage of the farmer and laborer, and to the detriment of the credit of the Nation; and dominate them and those who want more money as "selfish petty, clique of misguided inflationists.

Henry Clews, the prominent New York banker and financial critic, answered Senator Stewart's last article. Indulging in the above-quoted epithets, Mr. Clews undoubtedly thought there was but one side to the question at issue, and therefore felt himself justified in wallowing in vituperation. The discussion has attracted general attention, and the people are sure to perceive the weakness and the style of the argument of the gold men. The following merited retort to Mr. Clews by Senator Stewart is apropos:

VITUPERATION NOT ARGUMENT.

Mr. Clews substitutes abuse for arguments. This weakens his case. He admits the necessity of bimetalism, but fails to present a plan for the restoration of silver. He calls those who have agitated the question and have secured all the legislation which has been obtained looking to the restoration of silver, an ignorant, supercilious, boasting, selfish, petty clique.

What would have been the financial condition of the country without the silver certificates and Treasury notes representing silver now in circulation? What is there in the efforts of the silver men to bring this great question to the attention of the country, which justifies Mr. Clews in the epithets he uses? He states no wrong they have done. Why should he be anxious for their suppression or extermination? Epithets and abuses are not argument, and will not benefit his cause. His boast of wisdom and common sense is not sustained by his article. One would suppose that he is either ignorant of the question under consideration, or is endeavoring to avoid the issue by vituperation. He seems to have adopted the tactics of the criminal who had no defence, but as a last resort told his lawyer to abuse the counsel on the other side.

Avarice may destroy charity, benevolence and a just regard for the rights of others; but it should not deprive a man of his reasoning faculties or render him incapable of imitating good manners. I am disposed to be charitable to him, and to give him an opportunity to display the reason and common sense of which he boasts. I cannot accept the conclusion, although the evidence seems overwhelming, that when his supply of vituperation is exhausted, he will be bereft of reason.

In the hope that Mr. Clews will treat the subject with fairness, I will repeat for his information the question under consideration—is there gold enough to supply the legitimate demand for money of final redemption of payment to sustain the credit and business of the commercial world? If not, how shall the deficiency be supplied? I agree with Mr. Clews that bimetalism is a necessity, but differ with him as to the mode of establishing it, if I understand what he proposes.

INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT IMPOSSIBLE.

An international agreement is impossible. We have been trying that for many years without success. We sent commissioners after commissioners to Europe to invite joint action to restore silver. They all returned with the same story—that Europe is opposed to bimetalism. We have already waited eighteen years and suffered the loss of untold millions by contraction in hard times. Shall we continue to wait, or shall we be the first to act in restoring silver?

The United States took the lead before Germany in demonetizing silver. Why should we not be the first to right the wrong? The silver dollar was omitted from the Mint Act of 1873, without the knowledge or consent of the American people, before any country in Continental Europe rejected the white metal. They followed our bad example in demonetizing silver; I see no reason why they would not follow a good example if we had the courage and honesty to set one for them. The farmers and producers of this country are tired of waiting for Europe to relieve them. Their debts were more than doubled, while the price of their property was reduced more than one-half by the demonetization of silver.

They will not now be turned aside in their efforts to restore the white metal by abuse or vituperation.

MR. CLEWS' STATEMENTS.

Mr. Clews ought to be more careful in his statements of facts. He declares that all the faction (the silver advocates) cares to insure is that the producer shall get the highest price for his silver that the Government can be compelled to pay. Such a statement is unworthy a great financier. The silver men do not demand that the Government shall pay the highest price—or any price—for silver. They are opposed to the purchase of silver by the Government.

It was the monometalists who reduced silver to a commodity to be purchased by the Government for use as a token money, redeemable in gold. Silver enjoyed the sovereign right equally with gold in coinage for thousands of years before the gold trust secured its rejection to enhance the value of obligations for payment of money, in violation of every contract in the world.

Silver men demand the restoration of silver and that it may again enjoy, equally with gold, the right of coinage at the mint. It is coinage, not purchase, which will establish bimetalism. The purchase of silver to be coined, or represented by paper, redeemable in gold, is idle. If the value of silver must be sustained by redemption in gold, it has no place in our circulating medium. It is credit money—no better or more convenient than paper.

TOO MUCH CREDIT MONEY.

There is too much credit money already. We have in the world, in round numbers, $3,700,000,000 gold coin, $3,800,000,000 silver coin and $1,000,000,000 paper money.

On the gold theory nothing is money of ultimate redemption but gold. More than two-thirds of the money of the world is credit money. Previous to the demonetization of silver, silver coin was money of ultimate redemption equally with gold coin. The business and credit of the world at that time rested upon the solid foundation of more than $7,500,000,000 gold and silver coin. The amount of money of ultimate redemption, and which is not required to be redeemed is not more than one-half as much as there was in January, 1873. Population, business and credit have enormously increased. Ruin, bankruptcy and decay are inevitable on the gold standard.

The only possible relief is bimetalism. The gold men tell us we must wait for an international agreement—we must wait for Great Britain, who has already decided that she will not restore silver. Her Royal Commission refused to recommend the consideration of the question by an international convention, for reasons which cannot be changed.

ENGLAND A CREDITOR NATION.

England is a creditor nation and compels her debtors, largely citizens of the United States, to pay her in the dearest possible money. She boldly declares that her object in adhering to the gold standard is to maintain her position of financial supremacy and increase the obligations of her debtors. She also proclaimed by the unanimous voice of her Royal Commission that cheap silver was stimulating the production of wheat and cotton in India, and furnishing cheap bread stuffs for England, while it was liberating the British nation from paying tribute to the United States for farm products.

It is idle to suppose the ruling classes of Great Britain will surrender the advantage cheap silver gives them over the people of the United States. Notwithstanding the certainty that Great Britain will not consent to bimetalism, the dealers in money in this metropolis tell the producers of the United States that they must submit to contraction, hard times and poverty until England will consent to free coinage and join in an international combination for that purpose. They know she will not do it. The argument is justly viewed by the masses as an attempt to deceive. They understand the situation.

The bankers and brokers of Wall street buy, sell and invest on European account. A large and influential portion of their clients and employes are on the other side of the Atlantic. The approval of their patrons is vastly more important to them than the prosperity of the people of the United States.

FOR RESTORATION OF SILVER.

When Mr. Clews belittles the silver men by epithets, he should bear in mind that three-fourths of the voters west of the Alleghanies and South of the Potomac, and a large portion of those north and east of those points favor the restoration of silver. Nothing has prevented free coinage at any time since the discovery was made that silver had been demonetized except the veto power. If the dealers in money in the commercial centers of the United States really believe that it would be a calamity to restore silver and allow the people of the United States to enjoy the benefits of the money of the Constitution, they have cause for alarm, but an exhibition of anger and irritation is a mark of weakness. It should not be indulged in by the representatives of the mightiest trust ever organized on the face of the earth.

The friends of silver do not belittle nor underrate the power of the bankers and brokers of Wall street. On the contrary, they recognize the bold and successful combination of which they are a part as a dangerous and aggressive opponent.

GOLD AS A DICTATOR.

The gold trust dictates to monarchs, controls the armies and impoverishes the people of the old world. It has controlled the financial legislation of the United States for the last eighteen years, built up fortunes in the money centers of this country which by comparison dwarf the accumulations of the ancients. The people are tired of contraction, they are tired of the increasing value of money and the falling prices of property, and they must look with alarm upon the aggressions of the gold trust. They have taken a decided stand, and they will succeed. Their success will place credit on a solid foundation, furnish more money, relieve contraction and secure prosperity.

It is a mistake for New York City to place herself in opposition to the interests of the American people. Her growth, power and prosperity are the glory of the nation. Why should she be a part of a European combination to make money dear, enrich the owners of accumulated capital, suppress production and retard development in the United States?

FREE COINAGE INEVITABLE.

Free coinage is inevitable in the United States. It is the part of wisdom to accept the situation and make the best of it. No benefit can come from exaggerating imaginary evils, to alarm the people and unsettle the business of the country.

The constant cry for the last eighteen years, that any legislation looking to the restoration of silver will destroy the country, is becoming monotonous. The acts of Congress already passed looking to that end have saved the country from bankruptcy and produced the most beneficial results. Free coinage, and free coinage alone, will end the agitation, and insure stability and prosperity.

If Europe persists in withdrawing her investments in this country because the people are furnished sufficient money for the transaction of business, she must take the consequences. If she will sacrifice her securities to punish us, we are not responsible for her losses. We will have prosperity at home, whether the money of Europe remains or is withdrawn, if the volume of our circulation can be maintained equal to the legitimate demand for money.

A BOLD ASSERTION.

The bold assertion that the United States cannot remonetize silver without the aid of Europe has no foundation in fact. During the last eighteen years the increase of business and commerce among the thousand million inhabitants of Asia has increased the demand for silver for use as money vastly more than the demand for gold has increated in Europe. France maintained by metalism and a party between gold and silver at the ratio of 15½ to one for three-quarters of a century by free coinage of both gold and silver. The United States has double the population which France had during that period, and can absorb more than double the money that was required by France. All the silver produced is now used except the small surplus of bullion in the hands of speculators purchased since the recent silver agitation began. Such surplus bullion is the only cheap silver in the world, and the United States needs ten times that amount to relieve the stringency in the money market, and take the place of the gold recently withdrawn.

NOT A DIFFICULT TASK.

It would be by no means as difficult a task for the United States, in conjuction with Asia and South America, to maintain bimetalism, as it was for France during the long years in which she maintained bimetalism. But whether the United States can keep silver at a par with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1 or not she must try the experiment. Bimetalism is a necessity and an immediate necessity. All efforts to secure the aid of Europe have failed. We waited nearly a generation. Bankruptcy stares us in the face, and we can wait no longer; we must and will have more money. We will continue the agitation until silver is restored and the wrong of 1873 set right.

Query.

Will the County Commissioners kindly inform the undersigned why a bill for medicine, furnished the inmates of the county jail and indigent of the county during the month of May was allowed at their last meeting, when the County Physician was paid for the same last month according to contract? It would not be out of order for the Auditor to say why he audited the same. TAXPAYER.

A Plea for City Playgrounds.

City children are undoubtedly happy in their play, but I cannot watch them without sadness and a regret that the fuller pleasures of a country life will never be theirs at the time they are best fitted to enjoy them. The earnest pleading for a leaf or blossom from the flower laden tourist as, returning from his outing, he passes up the street; the eager band of merry children in pursuit of a wandering butterfly—fairylike visitor from a strange land—tell of a formless longing for the unknown freedom of the woods and fields. What can we do to add to the joys of a youth which is all too brief? As you enter your high school, these boys and girls enter on the serious duties of life. Then follows the struggle for existence, and a severe one it usually is.

We cannot give all these children homes in the country, we cannot give them all even an outing there; but we can give them playgrounds in the city; a very little plot here and there will do. We have reserved great parks and squares which we permit them to look at and sometimes to venture on. But as playgrounds these are practically useless; they are accessible to comparatively few. A vacant building lot in the proper district is far more to the purpose. Happy is the boy who lives near one! Notice the evidences of constant use it shows, the small baseball "diamond" clearly outlined, every smooth place pitted with marble holes.

What better investment could our cities make than to purchase small plots like this at intervals throughout the city, tear down the buildings, fill up the cellars, and leave them, with no forbidding sign, open to the children. Their little feet would soon grade and harden the ground. In giving the nation's future workers such an opportunity to lay the foundation for stronger and healthier bodies and brighter wits the city would reap abundant interest on the capital invested.—Frank M. Chapman in St. Nicholas.

Honest New York Shop Girls.

A gentleman who lives in Cincinnati returned home a day or two ago after a fortnight's sojourn here deeply impressed with the honesty of the New York shop girl. On the day after his arrival in town he went into a large retail shop in Fourteenth street and made some trifling purchase. The next day he missed a pocketbook containing fifty dollars in currency. He thought that he had mislaid it in his room at the hotel, and a diligent search was made for it. He gave it up as lost and would have dismissed the matter from his mind had not the clerk of the hotel suggested that he might possibly have left the pocketbook in some store.

The gentleman attached little importance to the suggestion, but about a week afterward he stepped into the Fourteenth street shop and laughingly asked one of the floor walkers if a pocketbook containing fifty dollars had been found there. Much to his surprise, an affirmative answer was given, and in a few seconds his property was restored to him. He learned that the saleswoman from whom he had made his purchase found the pocketbook on the counter after he had departed and promptly turned it in at the office.

"Are all your clerks as honest as that?" asked the Cincinnati man.

"Certainly," replied the superintendent of the store. "We have never yet failed to return property lost in this store to claimants who could prove their right to it."

"Well, that beats some towns," said the westerner. "Here's a 'V' for the saleswoman."—New York Times.

Those Wires on the Bridge.

Thousands of people cross the bridge every day, but comparatively few of them know much about the wires that are trained across the big structure. They are there in great numbers and of almost endless variety. Their resting place is on the girders. Through them countless messages—telephonic and telegraphic—are transmitted at all hours of the day and night.

Some of them resemble ropes, but they are not, for each contains 500 telephone wires. Of these there are five. Besides them are many other black, snakelike strands, which are other means of communication with Brooklyn and points beyond. Of course, nearly everybody is aware that the land ends of the Atlantic cables of the Commercial company also cross the bridge, but their location is generally misunderstood. They are securely fastened to the under side of the promenade flooring, in plain view of passengers on the trains.—New York Herald.

Magnificent Tobacco Crop.

Good news for smokers comes from Havana. It is expected by the best authorities on the subject there that the present tobacco crop will even surpass that of ten years ago in quality and quantity. It promises, moreover, to "cure" early enough to enable it to be sampled by July. The interior harvests of the last nine years—with the exception of 1888, which was a comparatively good one—had all been late in arriving. For instance, that of 1890, in spite of the most careful treatment, could not be got to "cure" fit for smoking until last January. The crop is roughly estimated at a quarter of a million bales, each of 100 pounds weight.—London Telegraph.

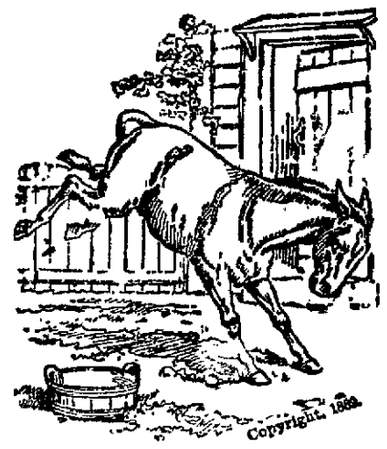

Flannel Shirt, No Waistcoat.

The washable waistcoats that come in many well chosen designs will be worn with the coats and trousers. They may be worn with the cheviot, but not the flannel shirts. If it is so warm that the flannel shirt must be donned for comfort it is too warm to add the weight of the dressy waistcoat.—Clothier and Furnisher.

No Bids for the House.

The ancient house at Jedburg, in which Mary Queen of Scots resided for several weeks during her visit to the border counties in the autumn of 1566, was offered for sale at Edinburgh last week, but there were no bids for the quaint and interesting dwelling, which was reserved at £2,300.—London Truth.

Æsop has told us the tale of a mule which, from overfeeding, galloped about and felt gay, saying to himself: "My father, surely, was a high-mettled racer, and I am his own child in speed and spirit." Next day he was sick and weary; he then exclaimed: "I must have made a mistake: my father, after all, could have been only an ass." A man, after eating a good dinner, may feel extravagantly joyous; but next day (I don't mean you to infer he feels like an ass) he is surly and grim, his stomach and liver are sluggish, he is morose, despondent and "out of sorts" generally. For Indigestion, Biliousness and all derangements of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is an unequaled Remedy. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to ferment and derange the digestive processes. It cleanses the system and cures pimples, blotches, eruptions and all Skin and Scalp Diseases. Scrofulous affections, as fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Swellings and Tumors, yield to its superior alterative properties.
